Economic Development may be categorized into initiatives related to the Halifax Corridor, Montreal Corridor, cross-border interchange, supply chain management pilots, point of origin for international opportunities, airport based activities, and industry collaboration. More information is being sought on these initiatives. For now, we can specifically address the Halifax corridor, Supply Change Management Pilots, and Industry Collaboration.

Halifax Corridor
The following activities begin implementation of the next steps discussed and debated at the “Global trade and Transportation: Next Steps” conference held on June 19 to 21, 2011 in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada (the “Halifax Conference”):

- Continue the connections made between and among the participants in the Halifax Conference and foster dialogue concerning the challenges and research questions presented at the conference.
- Identify methods that the Halifax Conference participants might continue to share and exchange assets, such as skills, knowledge, and contacts to advance the connections.
- Record and distinguish between the most immediate steps that can be taken and the longer view of what is needed to move the connection between Halifax and Michigan to a level of significant operation by creating the Great Lakes International Trade and Transport Hub (the “Great Lakes Hub”).
- Build an ongoing communication network among the Halifax Conference participants interested in moving the implementation of the Great Lakes Hub forward.
- Guide the collection of data and the building of a business case for the Great Lakes Hub.
- Plan and steer the reconvening of the Halifax Conference participants for future events at varied locations, the earliest being the Fall of 2011.
- Take overall responsibility for the feasibility assessment, business case development, and achievement of the desired outcomes for the Great Lakes Hub.
- Do all things necessary and reasonably expedient to make the Great Lakes Hub a reality.
- Foster business development within the Great Lakes Hub.
- Keep policy makers at all levels of government informed of the efforts of the Steering Committee and the business case developed.

Supply Chain Management Pilots
Economic development activities associated with the supply chain pilots include 1) review piloting value proposition with representatives from firms and development authorities, 2) identify firms and firm demographics that might be interested in having support to identify and refine their value proposition for regional supply chain activities, and 3) complete end-to-end integrated supply chain value proposition for pilot company. The following approach or methodology lists the activities which pertain to supply chain pilots:

- Identify pilot company candidates
- Explain value proposition to pilot company
- Complete value proposition evaluation by analyzing pilot company's end-to-end supply chain
- Positive value proposition to use region as a Hub and proceed towards implementation
- Implement pilot approach and monitor value with key metrics

Industry Collaboration

- Create an industry advisory board of supply chain, international trade, and transportation representatives to provide input and review Great Lakes Hub strategies and plans.
- Provide regular forums to discuss Great Lakes Hub plans and develop feedback to guide future planning and policy making.
- Guide in the development of position papers regarding legislative policy and infrastructure development.

- Planning and implementing conferences and gatherings among the Halifax Conference participants and others who may be asked to join in the effort.
